

Firearms Training

Ignatius Piazza | Front Sight Blog

Provided by the

Millionaire Patriot Free Handgun Firearms Training Manuals Free Gun Training Reports

Monday Blog Posts >

Ignatius Piazza: God, Guns, and a 5 for 1

June 29th, 2009

I have never quite understood why some people believe that God has no place for guns.

It must be that such people, through lack of knowledge and training, mentally attach such a negative personality to the gun that the thought of a pastor or church member carrying a gun to protect the flock offends their sensibilities.

A gun is an inanimate object. It is no different than any other tool.

A hammer in the hands of a carpenter can be used in a positive manner to drive a nail and build a church. The same hammer in the hands of a deranged violent criminal can be used to cave in your skull!

In the same context, a gun in the hands of a responsible, trained citizen is a tool that can be used in a positive manner to effectively defend against violent attack.

Guns are not evil or good. They are just guns.

Surely, God understands this concept.

Wouldn't God want good, responsible people to have the ability to protect themselves against the evil use of a hammer or gun?

Evidently, more and more places of worship across our country believe that God wants his flock armed.

See this recent Los Angeles Times news story regarding guns in churches and then see how I will help you do God's work with a 5 for 1 Lifetime Membership....

Southern California churches prepare in case gun violence shows up at the altar

Kelly Glasscock, / Getty Images

Fearing violence, some Southland churches are taking steps. Above, flowers at Reformation Lutheran Church in Wichita, Kans., where Dr. George Tiller was slain this month by an anti-abortion protester.

Made wary by recent events, church leaders are turning to security companies for help and even asking members to carry guns for security reasons.

By Kate Linthicum

June 22, 2009

One Sunday in March, a man strode down the aisle of the First Baptist Church in Maryville, Ill., pulled out a .45-caliber semiautomatic pistol and fired at the pastor.

The Rev. Fred Winters deflected the first bullet with his Bible, sending bits of it into the air like confetti. But the next three rounds hit Winters, killing him.

It wasn't the first church shooting of 2009 — in February, a man knelt before a cross at the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove and killed himself with a gun — and it wasn't the last. This month, Dr. George Tiller, a Kansas physician who performed late-term abortions, was shot to death in the foyer of his Wichita church by an anti-abortion protester.

Violence in churches is on the rise, experts say.

As more shootings at houses of worship make headlines, churches around the country are stepping up security, training their staff on how to detect and confront violent assailants, and asking congregants with licenses to carry guns during services.

That's what brought 15 Southern California church leaders to Garden Grove last week to attend an "Interfaith Intruder Response" course.

"I think that we're living in a violent time and we have a duty to ensure the safety of our flock," said Fred Rodriguez, a senior pastor at Elsinore First Assembly in Lake Elsinore.

Rodriguez said he came to the seminar because he worries that church violence will get worse. "The Scripture says we're living the last days," the clergyman said. "A person doesn't have to look too far to see evidence.”

“There are practical things we can do,” he added, “and we let God take care of the rest.”

The class, which met in a nondescript hotel conference room, was led by Vaughn Baker, who owns a security company called Strategos International. Baker is one of several church security consultants who travel the country like itinerant preachers, teaching seminars and writing up security plans for church leaders.

After an opening prayer, Baker offered some grim statistics. In the last decade, he said, 50 people were killed and 30 wounded in 35 church shootings. In 2007, there were six church shootings. In 2008, there were 18.

In most cases, the shooter was someone with a connection to the church.

“You guys know the world’s not getting better,” said Baker, who, along with many church security consultants, is a churchgoer and has a background in law enforcement. “We’ve got to protect ourselves. . . . The trick of it and the art of it is protecting the congregation and ministry without compromising their sense of worship and refuge and sanctuary.”

Traditional security measures, like metal detectors or pat-downs, might compromise that sense of sanctuary, Baker said. So he proposed other, subtler methods. He suggested that churches organize undercover security teams — and recommended that some members come armed with concealed weapons.

If violence breaks out at church, it could take minutes for even the fastest police and rescue crews to respond, Baker said, “and there’s a whole lot of bad that can happen in two to three minutes.”

Baker, like other security consultants, said churchgoers need to fight back instead of hiding if they’re being attacked, as many students have been coached to do in the event of a school shooting. “If I’m going to get beat, I’m going to get beat doing something,” Baker said. “I’m not going to get beat doing nothing.”

Seminar attendees — all men except for two women — nodded as Baker spoke.

One attendee, Al Brown, of Abundant Living Family Church in Rancho Cucamonga, said the pastor at his church at first was reluctant to let parishioners carry firearms into services. But with some persuasion from Brown, the former police chief at UC Irvine, the pastor came around. “He saw what was happening around the country,” Brown said.

Brown said he had attended three church security seminars. He said he did so in part because he worried that his church might be victimized because of its support for Proposition 8, the constitutional amendment to ban same-sex marriage.

Some of the churches that have been the scenes of recent shootings appear to have been targeted because of their stances on political issues such as same-sex marriage and abortion. Last year, a gunman who police said had a “stated hatred of the liberal movement” killed two people during a children’s performance at the Tennessee Valley Unitarian Universalist Church in Knoxville because the church advocates for gay rights.

Other shootings have been acts of domestic violence that just happened to occur in a church. That was the case last year when a man shot and killed his estranged wife at St. Thomas Syrian Orthodox Knanaya Church in Clifton, N.J.

Synagogues and black churches, frequent targets of racial vandalism and violence, have long had security measures in place. Even so, some are now boosting their efforts in the wake of several high-profile hate crimes, including this month's shooting at the National Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C.

"For us, it's an old threat that's just lifting its head again," said Paul Goldenberg, the director of the Secure Community Network, which provides security training to Jewish communities. "We have to do all we can."

No matter the shooter's motivation, churches are easy targets, experts say.

"During a church service, you've got a large number of people in a very confined and close space, and an armed gunman can put a lot of lead down the range in a very short amount of time," said Greg Crane, who owns a security consultant firm called Response Options.

"If the devil comes to visit someday," he asked, "how ready are you going to be?"

kate.linthicum@

latimes.com

Just arming church members is not enough.

You must be trained to levels that exceed law enforcement standards so you know when to shoot, and more importantly, when NOT to shoot.

And should evil descend upon your place of worship, you need to be able to immediately vanquish it with precision and power.

Front Sight stands ready to help you and your place of worship to do so!

See this special 5 for 1 Lifetime Membership (you get a free membership) to assist you and your church in having not only God, but also GUNS on YOUR side....

<http://www.frontsight.com/arm-the-good.asp>

Please forward this blog to all your friends and family so they too can share it with their places of worship.

I will be posting a different article on this blog each Monday so I look forward to your visit every week.

If you have an interesting photo, story or tip about a relevant topic of interest to gun ownership, firearms training or Second Amendment issues, please feel free to send it to me at:

Info@FrontSight.com or

Ignatius@FrontSight.com

See you next week,

Dr. Ignatius Piazza
Founder and Director
Front Sight Firearms Training Institute

Entry Filed under: Dr. Ignatius Piazza, Front Sight, Monday Blog Posts.

We invite you to sign up for Front Sight Firearms Training Institute's and Dr. Ignatius Piazza's 15 Special Gun Training Reports (approximately one every other day):

Subscribe to Free Gun Training Reports

First Name:

Primary Email:

Subscribe

Dr. Ignatius Piazza and Front Sight will never transfer or sell your email address.

Dr. Ignatius Piazza has personally written all of these Gun Training Reports that will give you little known and rarely talked about secrets of the firearms training industry plus a wealth of tactical information about self defense, firearms training, gun training mindset, mental awareness, and more!

Pages

- Ignatius Piazza
- Front Sight

Recent Posts

- Response to Free Gun Training Report #2 from Firearms Instructor
- Planning a Concealed Carry Course – Very Impressive Free Gun Training Reports
- Response from Veteran Cop about Quality of Gun Training
- 2nd Amendment Proponent
- Front Sight Mail Bag: Dry Firing is a Valuable Instructor Tool

Categories

- Concealed Carry Training
- Dr. Ignatius Piazza
- From the Mail Bag
 - Essays
- Front Sight
- Gun Training
- Handgun Training
- Interviews
- Monday Blog Posts
- Newsletter
- Press Room
- Rifle Training

- second amendment
- Self Defense
- Shotgun Training

Previous Months

Select Month

Popular Posts

- I'll Pledge My Life So You Don't Have To...
- A Gunfighting Living Legend
- DON'T DO THIS and You'll Shoot Better Than 99% of All Gun Owners
- Shotgun in Your Face and .380 in Your Pocket...
- Front Sight is Hiring!

© Copyright 2006 - 2009 Ignatius Piazza | Front Sight Blog Ignatius Piazza - all rights reserved. Site Map. Log in

⌵